For English Teachers—and Students Too!

The Publishers' Auxiliary for May 26 offers the following "good advice for all newspaper writers" in an editorial that seems good enough to pass on to our readers.

Maybe with school terms ending just about now, the teachers and students will not be so greatly interested in it, but as the use of simple, direct English is important to most of our readers in their daily activities, we are quoting it in this week's issue of the News just the same—

"Miss Kathryn Rowell, who made Chicago advertising history a year ago when Marshall Field and Company named her the first woman advertising manager of their basement store has some definite—and excellent—ideas on how to write advertising copy. Speaking before an Chicago Women's Advertising club recently on 'My Life and Good Times in Retail Copy,' she declared that retail advertising copy to me means talking to our customers just as directly as I did when, knee high to a grasshopper, I sold pink lemonade to the boys on our street and charged them all of one penny or five safety pins for it."

"Asserting that the job of advertising copy writers is not to 'express' but to 'impress' on ad readers their ideas, she offered her own eight-point 'code' for writing 'store keeping copy.' Here it is:

"1. Prefer the familiar word to the far-fetched. You'd be surprised how many words are unfamiliar.

"2. Prefer the concrete to the abstract. Don't leave anything to the fuzzy imagination of your reader. She hasn't the time to figure out what you mean. You're asking her to spend money and since basically she doesn't want to part with it, she unconsciously resists understanding what you're saying unless you make it so concrete it knocks her over.

"3. Prefer the particular word or idea to the general.

"4. Prefer the definite to the vague.

"5. Almost always prefer the direct word to the circumlocution. Instead of saying 'Mr. J. O. McKinsey was made the recipient of a medal,' simply say 'Mr. McKinsey received a medal.'

"6. Generally use transitive verbs. If you make all your passive verbs transitive, your copy will begin to stand up and hit back.

"7. Try to use your transitive verbs in the active voice.

"8. Prefer the short word to the long one—the English word to the foreign expression.

"It seems to us that this 'code' is a good one for all who write for newspapers—reporters, editorial writers, feature writers, etc.—as well as those who compose ad copy. Of course, none of these eight points is new. They're the fundamentals in prose composition, the principles we all should have learned when we first began writing down words in sentences and paragraphs. But . . .

"Who was it who said: 'The world doesn't need to be instructed so much as it needs to be reminded?'

Even more concise than the above eight rules is that which we once found in a college freshman rhetoric book. It stated that the fundamentals of good English speech or composition are "clearness, force and beauty."

Significantly, clearness is listed first. The most common mistake made by the average speaker or writer, it is generally acknowledged, is that of trying to do "fancy" writing (or speaking) before the art of clear, simple writing or speaking has been mastered. The great writers write simply. The greatest speakers are understood by the humblest listeners. That's why they are great.

The function of writing or speech addressed to others is, truly, often less to "express oneself" than to convey to the other person an idea, or to persuade the other person to a desired course of action. Hence, it is desirable to speak or write from the other person's viewpoint. To do this best, clearness is essential; simplicity is helpful; forcefulness may be necessary.

When a beautiful thought is expressed in obscure or ill-chosen phrases, its true meaning may be lost, or, at best, understood only after considerable effort has been made to grasp it.

Obscurity is at times a form of selfishness or even dishonesty, a perfect example of which is the vague, obscure wording of current requests for funds by the multiple government agencies in Washington. A new form of "double-talk" has been developed by these agency experts, the worst feature of which seems to be that the meaning of the words changes after money has been appropriated.

With Kermit Kline, his college roommate.

News of the Boys . . .

—V—

T/Sgt. Rufus E. Hamilton, APO 782, New York, takes time out to get caught up on things—

"Received an issue of the News today and see that you still carry my old address. No wonder I haven't been receiving the paper. For about a year and a half, I have been in Italy, but you still carry my last African address."

"Am sorry you haven't received the letters I wrote before."

"When figuring our points, I find that I have but 81, with the critical set at 85. Even though I have 31 continuous months of overseas duty, it didn't get me enough points to even think of coming home. The long trip from Egypt, where we started across the desert to North Africa, Meature, Algiers, Oran, then to Naples for Christmas of '43, Leghorn for Christmas of '44."

"Now we are for the first time set up in a big apartment. There are three buildings and a garage in all, plus what we built for our shops."

"Am sitting on the balcony overlooking the whole area and the shops while writing this letter. It sure looks like a long, hard job, getting all the equipment around here ready for shipment."

"We only carry two battle stars on our ribbons. That's the reason for the shortage in points."

"Will close for now with a hearty wish for a speedy finish to the Pacific war, so that all can return home and to normal activity again."

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MEETING GIVES VIEWS OF PEACE

Lasting world peace has its roots in the permanency of divine laws and cannot be expected to rise from the foundations of selfish desires and aims, the Christian Science board of directors told the annual meeting of the Mother Church, First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston June 4, according to a report received by the Antioch Christian Science society.

This was the fourth annual gathering of the Christian Scientists held under the restrictions of wartime travel, and the audience reflected the desire of the directors that members living beyond the 50-mile area of Boston should abide by the requests of the Office of War Transportation and remain at home this year.

The future presents a challenge that should be faced with enthusiasm rather than dread, the retiring president, Paul Stark Seeley, declared.

He urged, "Let us rise to the opportunities before us. Let us be eager to help solve the political, racial and economic problems confronting the human race. Let us not fear change, but confidently expect change. Let us resolve to express more of the limitless range of thought natural to man."

MOVIE TO BENEFIT RECREATION FUND

Arthur Laursen and Henry Rentner are co-chairmen for the benefit movie, "Fighting Lady," which is being sponsored by the Antioch Recreation association at the Antioch Theatre, June 13 and 14. Funds from the benefit will be applied toward a fund for a hard-surface playground at Antioch Grade school.

The fund for this purpose was started by the grade school children earlier in the year when the boys conducted a paper and scrap drive and the girls held a bake sale to raise some of the money.

The start of recreation activities for children of the community during the summer months will probably be postponed until the re-surfacing of the playground has been completed, the association has stated.

GEORGIA RAY DRURY PUPILS TO GIVE RECITAL FRIDAY

Piano students of Georgia Ray Drury will be presented in a recital Friday evening in the Grade school, at 8 o'clock. The program will include both beginners and advanced students, and will be open to parents and friends.

A group of Mrs. Drury's Waukegan pupils who were heard in a recital in that city the evening of June 1 is also to take part in the program here.

The Official board will meet at the church on Wednesday evening, June 13. This will be the first meeting of the board in the new church year, which begins June 1, and the new members will be present.

A short business meeting was held and the roll call was "A good health habit". The health project this year is the care of the feet and Fern Mattson gave a talk on "Your Feet Affect Your Posture." Florence Boltz gave a talk on "Good Looking Hands," and Anne Matson demonstrated the use of a sewing machine. The leaders helped to check work books during the remainder of the afternoon. Mrs. Mattson and her daughters served refreshments and the girls enjoyed a boat ride on Cedar lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Johnson and sons of Chicago spent Decoration Day with Mrs. Johnson's sister, Mrs. William Walker and family.

Mrs. Frances Gilliland of De Land, Fla., arrived last week to visit her daughter, Mrs. Raymond Hussey and family for a few weeks.

Navy Plans Expansion of Medical Facilities

"Naval medical facilities are being expanded to meet the emergency of increased casualties expected as the Pacific frontiers are pushed closer to the enemy's mainland fortresses in Japan and China," Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntire, Surgeon General of the Navy announced today. The projected plans include the establishment of several new Naval Hospitals and the expansion of already existing facilities.

"In order to staff these facilities adequately and to meet the other requirements of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, the Navy will need at least 4,000 more doctors and 10,000 Hospital corps WAVES, in addition to the thousands of Nurses already procured," the Surgeon General stated. "There are now more than 13,000 hospital corps WAVES on duty. Their performance has been outstanding. They have proved to be most competent in assuming many different duties in caring for the sick and wounded by serving in wards, laboratories and records departments of Naval hospitals and other Medical department facilities." Admiral McIntire continued.

"Training facilities for hospital corps WAVES have been established at Naval hospitals and other shore establishments. All WAVES enlistees in the Navy receive 8 weeks indoctrination at the U. S. Naval Training school, the Bronx, New York. Those who volunteer and are selected for the Hospital corps at the completion of this recruit training will then be given a hospital apprentice rating and sent to either the Hospital Corps school for WAVES at Bethesda, Maryland, or some other Naval Hospital for 8 weeks hospital apprentice training. This training includes both classroom and practical training in such subjects as Anatomy and Physiology, Elementary Chemistry, Hygiene on Sanitation, Bacteriology and Laboratory Technic, Materia Medica on Toxicology, Minor Surgery and First Aid, Nursing and Dietetics, Pharmacy and Metrology.

Admiral McIntire stated in outlining the extensive training of the hospital corps WAVES before they are assigned to duty;

"Upon satisfactory completion of their apprentice training, the WAVES are awarded Hospital Corps certificates. They are given a week's leave and then assigned to duty at one of the Naval Hospitals in this country. The first three weeks of this duty will be further training by Navy Nurses in hospital procedures, patient care and ward duties."

"At this time the WAVES have completed 19 weeks of training and are then eligible to receive further training as technicians in any one of 28 different fields, such as Dental, Laboratory, Bacteriology, Occupational Therapy, Neuro-psychiatry, Fever Therapy, Commissary, etc. The individual WAVES acceptance for this training will be determined to a large extent by an evaluation of her civilian experience and aptitude shown during previous training," the Surgeon General continued.

"The Hospital Corps offers opportunities for service and training in various fields that will be most useful as post war occupations. Any young women who is an American citizen, between 20 and 36 years of age, has completed at least two years of high school, has no children under 18 years of age and is in normal good health is eligible for enlistment in the WAVES.

"Our first consideration, our most patriotic cause, must be to provide the finest medical and nursing care for our wounded men. As we penetrate more deeply into the enemies defenses, our battles will be more intense and unfortunately, our casualties greater. This is best evidenced by the tragic price we have paid thus far as we have engaged the enemy ever closer to his home shores. At Tarawa casualties were 3, 175 equal to approximately 20% of the men engaged; at Saipan and Peleliu combined casualties were 17,410 approximately 25%; and at Iwo Jima 19,938, approximately 30%," Admiral McIntire stated.

"If we are to maintain our pledge to the men and women of the Navy that they will always have the best possible medical and nursing care, we must have more doctors and Hospital corps WAVES. The skill of the medical officers and Corpsmen and WAVES of the Navy have established the amazing record of returning 98% of all the wounded to recovery. This record must be maintained."

Volunteers in this area who wish to serve in the Navy as medical officers or WAVES Hospital Corpsmen may obtain complete information at the Office of Naval Officer Procurement, Board of Trade Building, 141 W. Jackson Blvd., Chicago, or at local Navy Recruiting stations.
